

Social and Personal

Mr. and Mrs. Eppa Hunt, Jr., will be hosts at a dinner at the Country Club on Thursday evening at 8 o'clock in honor of their house guest, Miss Helen Varick, daughter of General Lindsay L. Lomax, of Washington. The dinner, which will be a very handsome affair, will be followed by dancing, and the decorations will be unusually attractive. Miss Lomax has been entertained at a great deal in Virginia, and is well known in Richmond society, having visited here on several previous occasions. A number of attractive functions will be given for Mrs. Hunt and her guest during Miss Lomax's visit to Richmond.

Miss Corina Haglesfield, of Indianapolis, Ind., arrived in Richmond yesterday to be the guest of Mrs. James J. Pace, on Grove Avenue, for several days. Miss Haglesfield is en route for Powhatan county, where she will act as bridesmaid at the wedding of her brother, Robert Davy Haglesfield, and Miss Patty Holston, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Haskins Holston, the ceremony to take place at the "Mount Airy," the home of the bride's parents, at half-past 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon of this week.

Miss Haglesfield has visited Richmond for several weeks last spring, and has a number of friends in the city.

At the Woman's Club, "Everyday Life in the Canal Zone" was the subject of Miss Helen Varick's address before the members of the Woman's Club yesterday afternoon. Miss Varick is a very gifted and cultured woman, prominently identified with well-known women's clubs and organizations, and her talk throughout was intensely interesting. She is very clever and delightful, humorous, and the interest of her audience centers in the fact that the speaker is so interested herself in the subject of her discourse, and one at once realizes just why this particular woman was singled out by Mr. Taft to look into the conditions along the "Canal," as it is most commonly called. Miss Varick said that she disliked figuring herself into them, and as a class objected to them, and for that reason she had not brought any along. In searching out and seeking to remedy the problems that centered about the towns on the canal, she rode the greater part of the time in the cab of an engine, and yet retained kindly feelings for the great brotherhood of engineers. The government, in order to get skilled men who would stay, had to make family life possible, and Miss Varick gave a most interesting account of the life in the pretty and picturesque little towns.

Down in that wonderful land, where all the forces of nature were harnessed and used by man, the main struggle is to get suitable food supplies, new diseases and such diseases have practically been eliminated, and, of course, there are no ailments to speak of, and thus it is back to the women, who in reality were the main problem, after all. There were tight housekeeping and so much rain, women did not even have dusting to amuse them.

So it was that Miss Boswell organized

Fixed a woman's club, where all of them—the wives of the judiciary and army officers and of those who ran the steam shovel as well—might meet on a common ground with a common purpose and interest. She was very amusing, and told a number of pleasing incidents of how they gradually established schools and libraries, beautified the houses, and made the women content to stay and make the life around them.

In ending her address, Miss Boswell quoted from a current magazine, which she had taken into its beginning, but it required a far more delicate touch—ment—a woman's club—to insure its success.

Mrs. Thomas Cary Johnson was chairman of the afternoon, and the hostesses were Mrs. Elizabeth McVee and Mrs. John P. McGuire. The tea tables were decorated in slender vases of narcissus.

Urbahart-Tait Wedding.
Says a recent Baltimore exchange: "The wedding of Miss Dorothy Gordon Tait, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John B. Tait, and William Urbahart, son of the late Whitelie Urbahart and Mrs. Urbahart, of Richmond, was quietly celebrated at noon Saturday at the residence of his father, Mr. Urbahart, in the city. The ceremony was solemnized by the Rev. J. O'Donnovan, of the cathedral, in the presence of the immediate families only. The bride entered the room with her uncle, Charles Bernard Tait, by whom she was given in marriage to the groom, who was attended by his father, Mr. Richard Urbahart, as best man. She wore a going-away gown of black satin, with touches of white and a large black picture hat, trimmed with black and white feathers and a corsage bouquet of white and pink roses. Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Urbahart left for a Northern trip, after which they will visit Mrs. W. H. Urbahart, the bridegroom's mother, at her home in Richmond. When they return, which will be in about ten days, they will go to the Brocton for the early spring, and will spend the summer in the green spring valley. Among the guests of the two families present were Mrs. Henry A. Fenwick, G. Bernard Fenwick, Charles G. Fenwick, Mrs. William Reynolds, Miss Robb, Miss Grogan, Dr. and Mrs. E. A. Urbahart, Mrs. W. H. Urbahart, of Richmond; Mrs. E. O. McCabe, of Richmond; Miss Urbahart, of Richmond; Mrs. J. Henley Smith, of Washington; and Mrs. Mullen, of Washington."

Returned From Norfolk.
Miss Lora Crump, who has been a guest of Miss Lora Crump, Norfolk, has returned to Richmond. Miss Crump went to Norfolk to attend the dance given by the Churchland German Club on place on Friday evening. Decorations were in yellow flowers and palms in the ballroom and red and white were used on the tables in the dining room. Miss Lora Crump, of Baltimore, who has been a guest of Miss Grace Neal, is now visiting Miss Crump at the Chestfield for several weeks.

Marriage Announced.
Cards have been received here announcing the marriage of Miss Mary Welby Washington, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Henry Washington, and George Strong Clay, the ceremony having been performed in Atlanta, Ga., at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Piper, at 6 o'clock last Wednesday evening. The bride belongs to one of the most prominent and distinguished families in the State, and her wedding, though celebrated very quietly, is of much importance to society here.

Wild azaleas decorated the parlors, and pink and white blossoms were used everywhere in the house. The bride wore an exquisite gown of white marquisette over white messaline and trimmed in Irish lace. Her tulle veil was fastened with a wreath of orange blossoms, and she wore a handsome pearl and diamond brooch, the gift of the groom. Her bouquet was Bride roses and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Charles Piper, who was her sister's matron of honor, wore a handsome pink embroidered robe, trimmed with Irish lace, and carried a sheaf of pink roses. Mr. Piper was best man.

Following the ceremony, a buffet supper was served, and Mr. and Mrs. Clay left at once for a Northern wedding trip, going by way of St. Augustine, Jacksonville and Savannah.

Sharp-Townes.
Mrs. Frances Gwynn Townes has issued invitations for the marriage of her daughter, Miss Elizabeth Townes, to James W. Sharp, the ceremony to take place on the evening of Wednesday, May 3, at 7 o'clock in the home of the bride's mother, 508 East Franklin Street. The ceremony will be celebrated very quietly, with only a few intimate friends and relatives present.

Adams-Givens.
A very pretty marriage took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Barrow, 2801 Venable Street, on Monday evening, April 27, when Miss Alice Elizabeth Adams and Robert Douglas Adams, both of Charlottesville, Va., were married. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. S. Otto Wright, pastor of St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal Church, in the presence of a few friends and relatives. Miss Dena Gordon, of Richmond, was maid of honor, and Cleveland Nantz, also of this city, was the groom's best man.

Mr. and Mrs. Barrow returned to their home in Charles City county Tuesday evening. The groom is a prominent merchant of that place.

Mrs. Conquest's Home.
Mrs. Pleasant L. Conquest will be at home to her friends informally this afternoon from 5 to 7 o'clock in honor of her cousin, Mrs. W. Meredith, of Philadelphia, who is spending some time as her guest in Richmond. Mrs. Conquest has recently returned from visits to friends and relatives in Washington and Philadelphia.

Miss Henry Entertained.
Among the number of attractive functions that have been given in honor of Miss Nora Leary, whose marriage to Stephen Hasket Derby will be celebrated at half-past 8 o'clock to-night, was a very pretty little luncheon at the Country Club Saturday. Mrs. F. C. Woodward was hostess at the luncheon given on Saturday, and the table decorations were spring flowers.

Know Your City Study Class.
The theme "Industries," now being taken up by the Know Your City Study Class, is so absorbing that two afternoons will be devoted to the subject. Last week's meeting dealt with the offices and their condition. The second meeting, which will be held this afternoon from 5:15 to 6:15 o'clock, will take up the factories, and Miss Elizabeth Cooke, who is chairman of the day, promises a most interesting hour.

The meeting will be held as usual in the Sunday-school room of the Seventh Street Christian Church.

Organ Recital.
A very charming event in musical circles here this week will be the organ recital to be given in the Second Baptist Church on Thursday night. Bassett W. Hough, organist at the church, is leaving for Europe in June to spend a year or more in the study of organ music, and the recital is given to the congregation of the church and their friends by way of farewell. Hobart Smock, of Baltimore, a well-known organist in that city, will also sing on this occasion. The public is invited to attend.

Reception Last Week.
A very pleasing reception was given last Thursday evening from half-past 8 to 10 o'clock at the Conservatory of Music by the Richmond branch of the Woman's Temperance League of America. The parlors were filled with guests, and a charming program was rendered. Those taking part were: Mrs. William Hodges Mann, Miss Inez and completed his conquest of Richmond's chronic theatre-goers. He is even more delightful as an actor than he was as a lecturer, if that be possible. Easy, natural, and utterly unaffected, he made the light, quick comedy of his part a thing of joy. The part might so easily have been spoiled by the least bit of horseplay, the merest suggestion of overacting, that Mr. Niblo's deft and skilful treatment of his humor commands the utmost admiration. His performance was of the character that allows those who endeavor to observe closely the work of those on the stage to settle down into their chairs and simply enjoy every minute of it, confident in the knowledge that there are no flaws to pick.

Archibald-Hurt.
At her marriage recently celebrated in Edgewoodville, Ill., of interest here, where the bride has a number of relatives and friends, was that of Miss Julia Lee Hurt and Dr. James Stuart Archibald, the ceremony taking place on Friday, April 14. The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. D. Hurt, of Appomattox county, Va., and is a granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Hughes, of this city.

For Miss Woodbridge.
Miss Byrd Alvey entertained very charmingly at cards last Tuesday afternoon in honor of her house guest, Miss Martha Whiting Woodbridge, of Asheville, N. C. Five tables were entertained, and the decorations for the occasion were candles shaded in yellow and vases of daffodils.

In and Out of Town.
Mrs. H. C. Lee, of Norfolk, will arrive in Richmond to-day to be the guest of Mrs. J. Taylor Ellison for several days.

Mrs. J. B. Hawthorne, of Baltimore, is visiting Mrs. W. S. Forbes in this city for some time.

Miss Mary Butler, who has been visiting friends in Richmond for several weeks past, returned to her home in Matthews county, Va., yesterday.

Mrs. Everett Wadley is the guest of her sister, Mrs. W. W. Boxley, in Roanoke, for a few weeks.

Mrs. W. V. Wilson, who has been visiting friends here, has returned to her home in Lynchburg.

Mrs. Frederick Palen and her mother, Mrs. George Mayo, of this city, have returned from New York, and are now in Newport News.

Mrs. Walter E. Addison, who has been the guest of relatives here for the Talbot-Meredith wedding, has returned to Lynchburg.

Williams-Banks.
[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]—John M. Williams and Miss Ida R. Banks, of Spotsylvania county, were married at the bride's residence on April 23. Mr. and Mrs. Williams will reside in Spotsylvania county.

Pitiful State of Lady at Terrell, Whose Husband Had to Lift Her Up and Down.

Terrell, Tex.—"It is my pleasant duty," writes Mrs. Rosanna Wilson, of Terrell, Tex., "to acknowledge the benefit I have received from the Cardui Home Treatment."

"Last year I suffered untold misery, and my husband tried doctors and all kinds of medicines; but I must tell you I would have been in my grave if it had not been for Cardui."

"I was so weak last summer, my husband had to lift me up and down all the time, and I did not weigh 90 pounds."

"Since taking three bottles of Cardui I weigh 160 pounds. It worked like a charm. I will never be without it any more. Every woman ought to keep it."

Every woman would always keep Cardui handy for use if she knew what quick benefit it gave in cases where weakened vitality makes the body and brain seem tired and worn out.

A few doses of Cardui, at the right time, will save many a big doctor's bill by preventing a serious sickness.

After exposure to cold or wet, after overwork, grief or anything that weakens the vital forces, a few doses of Cardui will bring back your strength and prevent the ill effects that are otherwise nearly sure to come.

Drop in at the drug store and get a bottle for your medicine shelf to-day.

AMUSEMENTS.

Academy of Music—"The Fortune Hunter."

Don't Miss "The Fortune Hunter."

For two seasons Fred Niblo delighted constantly growing audiences at the Academy of Music with his wonderfully instructive and interesting "Travel Talks"; last night he appeared in the leading role of Winchell Smith's famous comedy, "The Fortune Hunter," and completed his conquest of Richmond's chronic theatre-goers. He is even more delightful as an actor than he was as a lecturer, if that be possible. Easy, natural, and utterly unaffected, he made the light, quick comedy of his part a thing of joy. The part might so easily have been spoiled by the least bit of horseplay, the merest suggestion of overacting, that Mr. Niblo's deft and skilful treatment of his humor commands the utmost admiration. His performance was of the character that allows those who endeavor to observe closely the work of those on the stage to settle down into their chairs and simply enjoy every minute of it, confident in the knowledge that there are no flaws to pick.

And that Mr. Niblo's work stood out so prominently speaks volumes for him, when one considers the unusually competent company with which he is surrounded. With a few changes it is the same company as that which ran in Chicago, and it is so big, and so generally excellent that it is impossible to mention individually all those who deserve it.

Everybody knows the story—of the young man, a failure, down and out, who is "staked by" a friend and goes to a little country town with a system of means by which he is to win the village heiress—plain, dark clothes, no smoking, no drinking, no swearing, but hard work, drab dullness, systematic and conspicuous church-going; of how he faithfully carries out his plan until he becomes a man and loves the work for its own sake, the dullness for its quiet, and the church because it is the church; of how the heiress does propose to him, and his consequent misery, until an honorable and happy way out of his engagement is found.

There is a touch of pathos, but only for an instant—long enough to make the play even more alive, not long enough to cause a choke. And the moral of it—think of a pure comedy with a moral—is so naturally, so humanly, so practically suggested, that without being priggish, it is a sort of play that almost everybody ought to see. It is a sugar-coated sermon full of fun.

The author drew a number of types and the management provided actors who presented them to life. Robert Lowe was excellent as the successful Wall Street man, Avon Broxer, as Roland, was a typical village "cut-up," Edward Saxton, with his wink, gave a good performance as Lockwood; Phil Bishop, as Tracey, the fat boy, and Francis X. Conlan, as the drunken deputy, were both artistically funny; Louis Pulver was unusually good in portraying the unattractive heiress, and Alma Belwin was charming as Betty, after she had been schooled and dressed. But Frank Bacon, as the pathetic, dreaming old druggist and inventor, shone next to Mr. Niblo. His performance was as convincing and artistic an example of what character work can be as one often has an opportunity to witness.

Several of the waits were very long, but the scenery is heavy and the properties almost innumerable, really a "big production," and then the first performance is always slower in the setting. And, besides, all of it was worth waiting for—even the final curtain, when the man and the girl stand in each other's arms, utterly oblivious of the pouring rain.

There will be three more performances, all of them as well worth seeing as was "The Country Boy."

Strong Card at Bijou.
"The Wolf," by Eugene Walters, author of "Paid in Full" and "The Eastway," was presented last night at the Bijou Theatre by an unusually strong cast. The scene of the drama is laid in the northern Canadian forests, and the plot is replete with thrilling climaxes. From the hell, which sent up the first curtain until the final scene, the unbroken attention of the audience was riveted upon the stage, and the house responded with repeated echoes to the more than creditable rendition of the performance.

As the hero, E. Fernandez, in the role of Jules Beauchamp, a young French Canadian, easily took first honors. The acting of Mr. Fernandez was both natural and graceful; he possessed a facility and ease of manner which rendered his portrayal of a difficult character exceedingly convincing and certainly popular.

The plot of the play was a simple one, and the story as told by the actors was not overdrawn. The love of the young Frenchman for Hilda McTavish, daughter of a mad Scotch settler, was the mainspring which moved the whole machinery of the play, which became involved by the evil designs of William MacDonal, an American railroad engineer.

The part of the heroine, the daughter of the mad Scotchman, was well acted by Miss Mildred Hyland, while William C. Mann, as William MacDonal, was a strong character. Tom Burroughs took the part of Andrew McTavish, the Scotch settler, known as "The Mad Man of the Mountains," and his acting was a feature of the performance.

While the cast was not large, each character was strongly presented, and the performance was just enough to interest even with a view to making it an easy winner. In the latter part of the final act there is a little gun play and a fight to the death with knives between the hero and villain on the mountains at daybreak. As is customary, the villain is badly punctured and the hero makes off with the queen.

Other characters in the performance are Batiste LeGrand, a Hudson Bay trader and northwestern nomad, which is essayed by Robert Deshon, while J. Davis Pendleton, as George Huntley, assistant to William MacDonal, the American railway engineer, adds humor and zest to the entire play.

Taken as a whole, there have been few productions presented upon the Bijou stage this season which have in any manner come up to "The Wolf," either in dramatic worth or in the strength of the cast. The house was full with the hero last night from start to finish, and the actors were literally showered with well-earned applause.

BRUNSWICK PUTS ITSELF ON RECORD

Enthusiastic Good Roads Meeting Held at Lawrenceville.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]—Lawrenceville, Va., April 24.—An enthusiastic meeting in the interest of good roads for the county of Brunswick was held here to-day. Announcement of the meeting had been made far and near, and it was attended by representative citizens from every section of the county. The courthouse was well crowded. Good roads speeches were made by Hon. I. E. Spatig, Hon. E. P. Buford, P. St. J. Wilson, State Highway Commissioner, and Frank S. Woodson, of The Times-Dispatch.

The meeting was called to order by Mr. Spatig, who nominated C. S. Barrow as chairman. In taking the chair, Mr. Barrow made quite a good roads speech, and introduced Mr. Buford, who, talking on the good roads question, explained the law as to good roads and warmly advocated a bond issue, and in conclusion introduced Mr. Wilson, the highway commissioner.

Mr. Wilson told how good roads are made in other sections of Virginia, and how they can be made in Brunswick county. He talked from a practical standpoint from start to finish, which called forth many questions, all of which were answered to the entire satisfaction of those present. The questions which were put to Mr. Wilson by a number of people from different sections of the county showed their interest in the subject, and his very satisfactory answers made a good impression.

At the conclusion of Mr. Wilson's remarks, and after he had answered a number of important questions put to him, Frank S. Woodson, Industrial Editor of The Times-Dispatch, was introduced by the chairman. Mr. Woodson spoke upon the assumption that the people of the county want good roads, and that they must have them, and as to how to raise money to get good roads. In this connection, he discussed thoroughly the question of a bond issue, and showed by a mathematical calculation that a bond issue would eventually pay for itself; that if bonds are issued, and the money used judiciously, the bonds would redeem themselves by the profits which will be derived from good roads.

At the conclusion of the speaking E. R. Temple, a progressive farmer of the county, moved that a vote be taken to ascertain how these present good roads are going to be raised, and a bond issue. This motion was seconded, and the vote called for by the chairman showed an overwhelming majority to be in favor of a bond issue for the county. In opposition to a bond issue, there were only four hands raised. This is the Brunswick county goes on record for good roads, and the county is going to have them.

LIEUTENANT ELECTED
First Sergeant Huband to Become Officer of Company.

By unanimous vote, First Sergeant Ewell M. Huband, of Company C, First Regiment, was elected last night to be second lieutenant of the company. Sergeant Huband has been with the company for several years, and his popularity with the men is attested by his selection without the mention of another name.

Captain C. M. Wallace said last night that he considered Sergeant Huband an excellent soldier, believing that he will make a successful officer.

There was a good attendance. Certificates for the good of the local battalion were made out, and the executive committee being requested to take hold of it.

FORTUNE IS GIVEN FOR SINGLE BOOK

Treasure or the most curious in the collection. Books with the arms of Kings and Queens, beautiful manuscripts antedating printing, autographs, manuscripts, annotated copies enriched by famous men and letters, complete the list. There are, for instance, eighty illuminated Horae, or books of devotional hours, broadly illustrative of the art of manuscript illumination. Among them are the famous Pembroke Horae, executed in England about 1440 for William Herbert, first Earl of Pembroke, beheaded in 1459, which passed out of the family keeping in the time of his grandson, and was not heard from until 1850, when it was found in the possession of the Borghese family of Rome, passed back to England by ship and was brought to this country by Clayton Ives, at the sale of whose library, in 1891, Mr. Hoe bought it of the "Messays of a Prentice in the VI. of France, the "Hours of Anne of Beauvais, daughter of Louis XI, and the Ovid executed for Anne de Bretagne, Queen to Louis XII.

No Caxton Chaucer. In the division of early English books, no Caxton Chaucer appears, but there is a large and perfect example of the "Troilus and Cressyde," by Wynken de Worde, the second edition, a second edition of Queen Elizabeth's prayer book, probably the first to be printed for the public; a first edition of England, of which only four copies are known, and the "Morte d'Arthur," with every leaf clean and sound, which last sold for $9,750; four folio Shakespeares, fifteen quartos, the "Venice and Adonis" on vellum, and the rare first collected edition of the poems (1610).

Among more modern authors, Blake is well represented, most notably with his Milton, the original edition of which only two other copies are recorded; Burns, by an uncut copy of the Kilmarnock edition, with an autograph letter to Captain Hamilton, of Dumfries; Defoe, by a large copy of the first edition of "Moll Flanders"; Gray, with the first edition of the "Elegy," and others too numerous to mention.

Nor are our own authors neglected. There are first editions from the press of Benjamin Franklin, a beautiful copy of the rare first edition of Champlain's "First Expedition to America," Cooper, Washington Irving and many others.

The sale will be held in four parts, of which this, Part I, beginning to-day, is divided into eighteen sessions, two daily, terminating May 5. The other parts, which have not yet been catalogued, will be sold next fall. Part I alone fills two volumes of 608 pages, making 3,358 items.
